Doctor of Philosophy in Education

Dreeben School of Education

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

Our Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) in Education degree at the University of the Incarnate Word prepares students for scholarly research and professional leadership. This multidisciplinary program provides opportunities for international experience; practical application of theory through guided practicum collaborative learning experiences, both locally and globally, to prepare scholar-practitioners for success in their professional endeavors. The doctoral program has three concentrations:

- Student Services and Higher Education Administration
- Adult Education, Social Innovation and Entrepreneurship
- Organizational Leadership and Evaluation

educational goals of working adults. Mentorship is provided by faculty in an academic community. Projects and research initiatives are supported through faculty collaboration, along with other students. The global nature of the program, its interdisciplinary curriculum and its emphasis on developing leaders make this a unique and outstanding program.
